Bulletin Board Pattern

Teacher: Have students decide whose story they believe—the wolf's or the pigs'. Have them cut out the matching art and paste it in the window. Then direct students to write on the door why they chose what they did. Have students color the house so it looks like it is made of straw, sticks, or bricks. Display the houses on a bulletin board titled "The Pigs or the Wolf—Whom Do You Believe?"

Bulletin Board Pattern

Teacher: Have your students write the name of a story character on the first line of the pattern. Next have them write advice that the character might give. Then give each child a real stick and have him or her cut out the bundle and attach it to the stick using cellophane tape. Display the bundles on a bulletin board.
